A VEGSTARIAE PHEROMERON.—Among the recent contributions to the museum of the Agricultural Department was a vegetable phenomenon in this shape of a common red garden-radish, donated yesterday by a lady of this city. The radish is perhaps an inch and a half in length, and its peculiarity consists in its formation, which bears a remarkable resemblance to a human hand, no effort of the imagination being required to discover at once the striking similarity. Not only are the fingers and thumb symmetrically represented by the roots of the vegetable, but even the finger-nails are distinctly defined by a white substance at the tip of each root. Mr. Glover, the assistant professor of the museum, confesses himself at a loss to account for this singular phenomenon, and has taken measures to preserve it for the benefit of the wonder-loving who daily visit his interesting collection A VEGETABLE PHENOMENON .-- Among the der-leving who daily visit his interesting collection of natural curiosities.
